The Office of the Historian of the Department of State currently is engaged in the preparation of the official record of the diplomacy of the Vietnam War for publication in the Department of State's documentary series Foreign Relations of the United States. The present focus is on the 1961-1963 period. In connection with that project, the Office of the Historian is planning to interview a number of former CIA employees who had served in Vietnam in order to fill in possible gaps in the official documentation. In addition to the interview, the Office also would be interested in any personal papers that might relate to the individual's duties in Vietnam.

Your name was submitted to the Agency as one of the persons of interest to the Department of State for an interview. The interview will be conducted sometime in early 1984 by official historians and other personnel of the Office of the Historian who hold Top Secret and other appropriate security clearances. Prior to its publication, each Foreign Relations volume will undergo a full clearance and declassification procedure which includes its review and approval by CIA of any information relating to the Agency's activities.

Should you be contacted by the Office of the Historian, please give them your full cooperation. Although I am sure* that you understand that your pledge of secrecy remains effective regarding Agency operations, you should feel free to discuss any matter in that time period that would not reveal specific Agency activities. Should you have any questions whether or not you may discuss a particular topic or disclose particular information, I would ask that you contact the Directorate of Operations Information Review Officer, [Redacted] for further guidance at [Redacted]
